Staff Predictions

Todd D. Burlage: Notre Dame 24, Miami (Ohio) 13

Eleventh-year head coach Chuck Martin — a former Irish assistant — and the RedHawks entered 2024 off an 11-3 season in which they claimed the first MAC title for the school since 2019. The road to a repeat hinges on the play of sixth-year senior quarterback Brett Gabbert. He entered this season third in program history in passing yards (7,893) and touchdown passes (59).

Miami opened with a 13-6 loss at Northwestern Aug. 31, during which it gained only 267 yards of offense before an early bye week and a game versus Cincinnati in Week 3. Picked to defend its MAC title, Miami returned 12 starters and could give Notre Dame fits if the RedHawks can hang around early.

Steve Downey: Notre Dame 27, Miami (Ohio) 6

Yes, the RedHawks won the MAC last year and were predicted to do it against this year, ahead of Northern Illinois among others. And yes, their defense — anchored by outstanding linebackers Matt Salopek and Ty Wise — is the real deal. That is reason enough to be concerned considering how poorly the Irish offense performed the first two weeks of the season.

However, Miami (Ohio) doesn't possess an offensive weapon the caliber of NIU's Antario Brown, who was a one-man wrecking crew with 225 yards from scrimmage against the Irish in Week 2. I expect the Irish defense will be able to take control of this one, not unlike what happened to the RedHawks in their 13-6 loss at Northwestern in Week 1.

Kyle Kelly: Notre Dame 23, Miami (Ohio) 16

Until I see differently, I believe the Irish could be in for another brawl with a MAC team — especially since former Notre Dame assistant Chuck Martin is Miami's head coach. I'll still give the Irish the benefit of the doubt to win, but I see it being much closer of a contest than what it should be.

Tyler Horka: Notre Dame 30, Miami (Ohio) 14

One Mid-American Conference loss was enough for Notre Dame. It took the 11th try and a Fighting Irish team getting too far out in front of its skis for the MAC to finally notch a victory over Notre Dame, and it's not going to happen two times in a row.

That said, is it going to be particularly pretty for Marcus Freeman and Co.? Probably not. The Irish showed in the home opener that they actually aren't a top-five-caliber team. But they are better than the RedHawks, and they'll do enough to let that be known in the second game in South Bend of the season.

Mike Singer: Notre Dame 34, Miami (Ohio) 9

The Irish had their seemingly annual test/loss against a Group of Five team already this fall when Northern Illinois pulled a stunner and knocked off Notre Dame. I don't see it happening twice.

I like Notre Dame to win this one rather comfortably. Miami had a strong 2023 campaign and looks to have a competitive defense, but I don't see the RedHawks having much success moving the ball on the Irish.

Jack Soble: Notre Dame 24, Miami (Ohio) 10

Miami is better defensively than some of Notre Dame's Power Four opponents, particularly Purdue. It wouldn't be a shock if the offense looks sluggish, but Riley Leonard — if he remains the starting quarterback — has to protect the football and not let careless turnovers hurt the Irish like they did against NIU.

I think the Notre Dame defense really takes what happened during the last home game personally and puts on a show, halting any chance of a RedHawks upset.

Facts & Figures NOTRE DAME VS. MIAMI (OHIO)

Date: Sept. 21, 2024
Site: Notre Dame Stadium in South Bend
Kickoff: 3:30 p.m. ET
Television: NBC/Peacock
Radio: Notre Dame IMG affiliates
Series facts: The Irish are 2-0 against the RedHawks, winning 46-0 in 1909 and 52-17 in 2017.
Head coaches: Miami (Ohio) — Chuck Martin (56-64, 11th season); Notre Dame — Marcus Freeman (21-9, third season).

Noting Miami (Ohio): The RedHawks' last Power Four-level win came at Cincinnati (31-24 in overtime) in the annual battle for the Victory Bell on Sept. 16, 2023 ... Miami (Ohio) allowed 3.6 rushing yards per carry and 6.6 passing yards per attempt last season, both ranking in the upper quartile of the FBS ... The RedHawks' offensive line returns four starters — including second-team All-MAC tackles Will Jados and Reid Holskey — who helped the team rush for 158.1 yards per game and 4.4 yards per carry in 2023 ... Miami (Ohio) cornerback Raion Strader returns after being named an FWAA Freshman All-American ... Wide receiver Cade McDonald was the RedHawks' primary punt returner last season, and they finished 15th in the nation in 2023 in punt return average.
